MEMORANDUM OPINION DENYING DEBTOR’S
MOTION FOR SANCTIONS AND GRANTING DECLARATORY RELIEF

Debtor previously owned two condominiums requiring him to pay periodic assessments to the Villa Medici’s Condominium Association (the “Association”). Debtor stopped paying these assessments, filed a Chapter 13 bankruptcy case, and surrendered his interest in the condominiums. The Association, through a receiver, then collected rents on the surrendered condominiums and applied the monies to the oldest assessments due, all pre-petition. Debtor now seeks sanctions<sup>1</sup> against the Association making two arguments—that the Association violated the discharge injunction and the automatic stay, first, by applying the collected rents to discharged pre-petition assessments and, second, by attempting to collect “discharged” post-petition assessments he has no liability to pay. Because the Debtor’s liability to the Association arises from a covenant running with the land as opposed to a contractual obligation, the Court rejects the Debtor's arguments finding that the Association did not violated neither the discharge injunction nor the automatic stay and that the Debtor remains liable for all post-petition assessments until legal title to the condominiums transferred to a third party. Debtor's motion for sanctions is denied.

The Court confirmed Debtor's Second Amended Chapter 13 Plan<sup>8</sup> that provided "[t]he debtor is responsible for paying all post-petition ongoing homeowners assessments, homeowners' dues, and/or property taxes; the automatic stay shall not apply to these debts."<sup>9</sup> The Association however received no payments from the Debtor either under the confirmed plan or outside of his Chapter 13 case. Debtor essentially just stopped paying all assessments due or accruing to the Association. Debtor made all payments due to his other creditors under his Chapter 13 Plan and later received his discharge.<sup>10</sup> The Discharge Order provided "a creditor

<sup>5</sup> Unit 28's mortgage was with CitiMortgage, Inc. CitiMortgage moved for relief from the automatic stay on April 5, 2011. (Doc. No. 33). The Court granted CitiMortgage's motion on April 29, 2011, allowing CitiMortgage to obtain an in rem judgment against the property. (Doc. No. 35). Unit 27's mortgage was with Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC. Ocwen moved for relief from the automatic stay on September 26, 2011. (Doc. No. 42). may have the right to enforce a valid lien . . . against the debtor’s property after the bankruptcy, if that lien was not avoided or eliminated in the bankruptcy case.”<sup>11</sup>

Because many unit owners in the Villa Medici neighborhood also were not paying condominium assessments, the Association convinced the state court to appoint a receiver to rent empty units and use the collected rent monies to pay outstanding assessments associated with each unit.<sup>12</sup> The receiver rented at least one of Debtor’s units and collected $9,290.39.<sup>13</sup> The Association then applied the monies to the fees owed on the unit—the fees due before the Debtor filed bankruptcy totaling $2,474.81.<sup>14</sup>

Debtor later reopened this case<sup>15</sup> and seeks sanctions against the Association. Debtor argues that the Association violated the automatic stay and the discharge injunction by applying the rent monies to the pre-petition assessments and that he has no liability for post-petition assessments because the fees “emanate” from a pre-petition contract between the Association and the Debtor.<sup>16</sup> The Association responds<sup>17</sup> that it did not violate the automatic stay or the discharge injunction by applying the rent monies to the pre-petition assessments because it was only taking in rem action against the property and was not collecting a debt against the Debtor. The Association also argues the Debtor is liable for post-petition assessments because the confirmation order directs the Debtor to pay the fees, which he failed to pay, and the Declaration creates a covenant that runs with the land unaffected by the Debtor’s bankruptcy or his discharge.<sup>18</sup>

<sup>18</sup> The Court heard oral argument on November 10, 2015 and took this matter under advisement. The Association filed a notice of supplemental authority on December 23, 2015. Doc. No. 64.

The Declaration supports the position of the Association and provides “[t]he Association is hereby granted a lien on each Unit, which lien shall secure the payment of all assessments, interests thereon, and reasonable attorneys’ fees incurred as an incident to the enforcement of said lien. . . . The lien shall be effective, have priority and be collected as provided by the Act.”<sup>19</sup> The “Act” is defined as “the Condominium Act of the State of Florida in effect on the date of recordation of this Declaration of Condominium.”<sup>20</sup> The Condominium Act<sup>21</sup>, in turn, provides “[t]he association has a lien on each condominium parcel to secure the payment of assessments.”<sup>22</sup> The Declaration similarly provides “[a]ll of the restrictions, reservations, covenants, conditions and easements contained herein shall constitute covenants running with the land.”<sup>23</sup> The Declaration then provides “[l]iability for assessments may not be avoided by abandonment of a Unit.”<sup>24</sup>

The legal issue is whether the obligations created by this Declaration “run with the land” and are non-dischargeable liens secured by the real property or, instead, mere contractual obligations between an association and a real property owner. Looking to Florida law, I hold that the Association’s assessments are covenants running with the land. They remain enforceable liens post-discharge until liability shifts to a new property owner upon a formal transfer of title to the land.

“Property interests are created and defined by state law.”<sup>25</sup> The Court therefore must look to Florida property law to analyze the Declaration’s legal effect. The Florida Supreme Court stated “[c]ovenants are loosely defined as ‘promises in conveyances or other instruments pertaining to real estate.”<sup>26</sup> The Florida Supreme Court also cited a Florida District Court of Appeal for a definition of covenants running with the land:

‘A covenant running with the land differs from a merely personal covenant in that the former concerns the property conveyed and the occupation and enjoyment thereof, whereas the latter covenant is collateral or is not immediately concerned with the property granted. If the performance of the covenant must touch and involve the land or some right or easement annexed and appurtenant thereto, and tends necessarily to enhance the value of the property or renders it more convenient and beneficial to the owner, it is a covenant running with the land.’<sup>27</sup>

“The declaration, which some courts have referred to as the condominium’s ‘constitution,’ strictly governs the relationships among the condominium unit owners and the condominium association.”<sup>28</sup> Indeed, “[a] declaration of a condominium is more than a mere contract spelling out mutual rights and obligations of the parties thereto-it assumes some of the attributes of a covenant running with the land, circumscribing the extent and limits of the enjoyment and use of real property.”<sup>29</sup> The Condominium Act similarly provides “[t]he declaration...may include covenants and restrictions concerning the use, occupancy, and transfer of the units”<sup>30</sup> and “[a]ll provisions of the declaration...run with the land, and are effective until the condominium is terminated.”<sup>31</sup> Under Florida law, obligations imposed by declarations encumbering real property are more akin to covenants running with the land than contractual obligations detached and separate from real property ownership.

Granted, courts in other jurisdictions are split on whether post-petition assessments are dischargeable in bankruptcy.<sup>32</sup> As Judge Briskman explained noting three approaches to the issue:

One line<sup>33</sup> of authority has held post-petition assessments nondischargeable because the obligation to pay assessments arises from a covenant running with the land. A second line<sup>34</sup> of authority has held that post-petition assessments are dischargeable because they arose from a prepetition contract. A third line<sup>35</sup> has

The Court does not address the issue of whether [the Declaration of Covenants, Conditions, and Restrictions] run with the land under Utah state law. Despite the fact that the Debtors are listed on the title to the property, the Court finds that the Debtors have no consequential interest in the Property that measure up to rights to exercise ownership interests and control. taken a compromise position that post-petition assessments are dischargeable unless the debtor resided in or leased the unit.<sup>36</sup>

Judge Briskman explained “[i]n 1994, Congress attempted to resolve this split of authority by enacting Bankruptcy Code Section 523(a)(16)”<sup>37</sup> However, 523(a)(16) does not apply to Chapter 13 discharges,<sup>38</sup> and “[t]he discharge does not affect a secured creditor’s interest in real property.” So, the contrasting conclusions in the three approaches remain relevant.

This Court agrees with Judge Briskman and the Rosenfeld line of cases that “[t]he obligation to pay homeowners’ association assessments is based on a covenant running with the land, a property right. Generally, the discharge does not modify property rights.”<sup>39</sup> The Declaration here outlines the unit owner’s responsibility for assessments and this responsibility, under Florida law, and is a covenant that runs with the land.

<sup>36</sup> In re Rivera, 256 B.R. 828, 831 (Bankr. M.D. Fla. 2000) (collecting cases, citations repositioned). The line of cases stem from two circuit court decisions—River Place E. Hous. Corp. v. Rosenfeld (In re Rosenfeld), 23 F.3d 833 (4th Cir. 1994) and Matter of Rosteck, 899 F.2d 694 (7th Cir. 1990). Both of these cases involved Chapter 7 debtors. The Rosenfeld court noted “[u]nder the Declaration, the obligation to pay assessments is a function of owning the land with which the covenant runs. Thus, Rosenfeld’s obligation to pay the assessments arose from his continued post-petition ownership of the property and not from a pre-petition contractual obligation.” 23 F.3d at 837. Similar to the Debtor in this case, the Debtor in Rosenfeld “claimed he intended to abandon all interest in the unit . . . [and] asserted no ownership interest in the unit . . . [The Debtor was] still the record title owner.” Id. at 835. The Rosteck court, in contrast, wrote “the assessments arose out of a pre-petition contract and were therefore a pre-petition debt. The bankruptcy court and, ultimately, the district court, both held that the post-petition condominium assessments were pre-petition debt, and therefore dischargeable. We agree.” 899 F.2d at 696.

Md. 2014), as corrected (Jan. 30, 2014) (“Because 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(16) is not specifically listed among the exceptions to a Chapter 13 discharge entered after completion of all of a debtor’s payments under Chapter 13 plan, the in personam obligation to pay condominium fees does not survive as an exception to discharge. But, this obligation survives discharge as an in rem obligation because it is a covenant running with the land. If it were otherwise, a debtor could continue to live in a unit after completion of a Chapter 13 plan in perpetuity without the obligation to pay the same fees that neighbors must pay.”); In re Colon, 465 B.R. at 662 (“[A]ccording to the plain language of § 523(a), § 523 does not apply to discharges granted under § 1328(a.)”); In re Danastorg, 382 B.R. 585, 588 (Bankr. D. Mass. 2008) (“Section 1328 does not mention section 523(a)(16), and the Court finds that section 523(a)(16) is inapplicable to Chapter 13 cases, where the Debtor has an ongoing duty to pay post-petition obligations, such as utilities and condominium fees, as they come due.”).

<sup>39</sup> In re Rivera, 256 B.R. at 831. The Court notes that Rivera was a Chapter 7 case but the analysis concerning declarations as creating covenants that run with the land still applies.

The Debtor urges this Court to treat the Association's Declaration as a pre-petition contract between the Debtor and the Association, and to follow the reasoning of non-Florida courts.<sup>40</sup> The Court rejects this interpretation.

Concluding that the Declaration here creates a covenant that runs with the land, the Debtor fails on both of his arguments. He is responsible for all accruing post-petition assessments unless title to the real property transfers. And, the Association did not violate the automatic stay or the discharge injunction by applying rent monies to its pre-petition lien.

The Debtor is responsible for post-petition assessments on the property until a transfer of title occurs. Debtor admittedly is relieved of any in personam liability that arose pre-petition once a discharge issues.<sup>41</sup> But, assessments will continue to accrue after the bankruptcy is filed, and the discharge will not relieve the Debtor of these post-petition in personam liabilities. Debtor remains personally liable for the post-petition assessments because the obligation runs with the land from the time of his discharge until title to the real property transfers.

Debtor's surrender of the units is irrelevant. Debtor was the record owner of the units until the title transferred. "Surrender" does not require the debtor to turn over physical possession of the collateral; the Bankruptcy Code uses the word 'deliver' when it intends physical turnover of property. Moreover, construing 'surrender' to require the debtor to deliver property to the secured creditor would circumvent state law obligations by allowing the secured creditor to bypass state foreclosure requirements. 'Surrender' is not equivalent to 'foreclosure.'<sup>42</sup> "[A] mortgagee has no right to possession until transfer at a foreclosure sale. So, the mortgagor continues to legally own the property after default until a foreclosure or

<sup>40</sup> Only one Florida bankruptcy court has accepted the "contractual" argument. In re Wasp, 137 B.R. 71 (M.D. Fla. 1992)(Judge Baynes). I do not find this dated minority opinion persuasive.

<sup>41</sup> The Association never sought to collect pre-petition assessments from the Debtor after he filed this bankruptcy case. They filed no proof of claim and requested no monies from the Chapter 13 Trustee. Instead, they looked to their enforceable in rem remedies against the real property by collecting rent on the unit and applying it to pay the pre-petition assessments.

otherwise valid transfer of title occurs. A debtor's indication of intent to surrender real property does not change this. [Again,] '[p]roperty interests are created and defined by state law.'"<sup>43</sup> It is the unit owner's obligation to pay assessments associated with the unit—this obligation is provided for in the Declaration and by statute.<sup>44</sup> The unit owner remains liable for the assessments until he or she is no longer the record owner.<sup>45</sup> Therefore, the Debtor is liable for the post-petition assessments,<sup>46</sup> and the debt is not discharged.

And, the Association did not violate the automatic stay or the discharge injunction by applying collected rents to unpaid pre-petition assessments. The Declaration and the statute support the existence of a lien on the property for unpaid assessments—including pre-petition assessments. When the Association applied the collected rent monies to the prepetition assessments due, it did not violate the discharge injunction or the automatic stay. The Association did nothing to collect the monies personally from the Debtor.<sup>47</sup> And it is within the Association's rights—as provided by the Act, the state court receivership program, and the Declaration—to apply the monies it collected against the prepetition amount owed. Those assessments were a lien against the unit that arose from a covenant that runs with the land. The

The individual is liable for assessments based on ownership of the unit, which is subject to the covenant to pay assessments.”). See also Fla. Stat. § 718.116(1)(a) (“A unit owner, regardless of how his or her title has been acquired, including by purchase at a foreclosure sale or by deed in lieu of foreclosure, is liable for all assessments which come due while he or she is the unit owner.”); Doc. No. 60-4, Sec. XIII, ¶ C (“Each unit owner shall be responsible for the payment of the assessments imposed against the unit owner’s Unit in an amount equal to the percentage of responsibility for payment of common expenses set forth in Exhibit ‘C’ attached hereto.”).

Dec. 1, 2015) (“Foster holds that the nondischargeable liability continues to accrue ‘as long as [the debtor] maintains his legal, equitable or possessory interest in the property....’ While the Debtors had given up possession of the Kirkland Condominium, they had not divested themselves of their legal and equitable ownership interests in it. As the bankruptcy court correctly noted, surrender under the plan ‘[did] not effectuate a transfer of the property.’”) (emphasis and alterations supplied in Batali) (internal citations omitted).

<sup>46</sup> Indeed, the Debtor’s confirmed Chapter 13 Plan required him to pay all accruing post-petition assessments, which he failed to do.

<sup>47</sup> The receivership program provided that the receiver could use the rent monies to satisfy the assessments owed on the units. Specifically, Doc. No. 60-3, ¶ 35G provides “[t]he Receiver shall use the sequestered funds that are collected to pay the assessment payments associated with each respective unit.” The “sequestered funds” includes those funds collected from renting the units—both units that already had a tenant and those that were vacant. Doc. No. 60-3, ¶¶ 35A, B, and C.

Association need not file a claim of lien or a claim in this bankruptcy case to collect these amounts.

Debtors' Motion for Sanctions is denied. The Association may pursue collection of unpaid post-petition assessments against the Debtor in state court or any other appropriate forum without violating the automatic stay or any discharge injunction. A separate order consistent with this Memorandum Opinion shall be entered.
